Nine Business Owners Graduate Entrepreneurship Training

Nine Quincy and Milton Chamber of Commerce business owners graduated from the Quincy Chamber of Commerce's QUEST Program June 16.

The bi-weekly classes began in November 2020 at Quincy College, using the curriculum designed by the nationally recognized non-profit company's Interise "StreetWise MBA" Program.

Each participant learned how to improve, understand and grow their current businesses using the hands-on curriculum, interactive peer-to-peer learning, CEO Mentors and guest experts. Graduates received their certificates after oral presentations of each business's 3-Year Strategic Growth Plan to a group of private and public city leaders.

The program was financed through a CDBG Grant from the City's Planning Department under the direction of James Fatseas and Sean Glennon along with the support of Mayor Tom Koch.

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce plans on starting a second class in the fall of 2022 for a new group of Quincy and Milton based entrepreneurs who are current members of the Chamber. For more information business owners can contact the Chamber at info@the-quincy-chamber.com.

BBB: How To Keep Costs Down When Inflation Hits

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Inflation is higher than it has been since the 1980s in both the United States and Canada. With prices rising on everything from gas to groceries to housing costs, how can you buy what you need and still stay on budget?

Inflation is impacting every household. The same amount of money buys less than it did just months ago, so paychecks don't go as far. When price hikes hit people who already have limited budgets, covering basic monthly expenses becomes difficult. Parents may find themselves having to choose between healthy meals and cheaper, less nutritious options. Young people must decide whether to put gas in their tanks or pay tuition. However, all income levels are showing signs of financial stress. Even high earners are cutting back.

Tips for dealing with higher prices

- Know what you're spending. Compare your 2021 bank and credit card statements to your 2022 statements to see how inflation is impacting you. This will also give you an idea of where you might be able to make cuts. If your spending in some areas has dramatically increased this year, you can figure out specific strategies for reducing costs.

- Stick with your current vehicle. Both new and used cars are expensive and in limited supply right now. Keeping your current ride is likely more economical if you don't need a new car. If you are leasing a car, the Wall Street Journal recommends buying it. That's because the car's price was set at the start of your lease - before the high inflation began.

- Get smarter with your grocery shopping. Meat and fish have seen some of the highest price increases. Eating vegetarian a few nights a week will help reduce food costs. Also, getting serious about meal prep, shopping your pantry, and reducing food waste will help lower grocery bills.

- See a sale? Jump on it. Stock up if you see a good price on an item you regularly use, such as soap or paper towels. Don't wait until you run out.

$1.36 Million For 10 Community Preservation Projects

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors recently approved allocating $1.36 million to 10 community preservation projects, with roughly half of those funds going to the Department of Natural Resources for work in municipal parks and playgrounds.

Councillors approved the community preservation projects during their meeting on June 21 in a 6-0 vote. Councillor Anne Mahoney voted present while Councillors Nina Liang and Brian Palmucci were not there for the vote.

Each of the projects had previously been vetted by the city's Community Preservation Committee.

Three of the projects receiving funds are categorized as recreation initiatives.

The Department of Natural Resources will receive

$346,000 for work at Forbes Hill Park. The money will pay for replacing the existing basketball and tennis courts on site, replacing and improving playground equipment, and the planting of approximately 30 trees throughout the park. Kristen Powers, the city's CPA administrator, wrote in a memo to councillors.

The department was also awarded $340,000 to replace the basketball courts at Heron Road Park, Mass Fields Park and the Quarry Street playground.

The Quincy Public Schools and Clifford Marshall Elementary School and PTO were allocated $30,000 for a first-grade butterfly and bird garden and other landscape improvements, including a new fence along Southern Artery.

Six of the projects fall under the umbrella of historic preservation.

The United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum will receive $184,786 for continued preservation projects at the USS Salem. Powers said that work includes a structural survey of the ship performed below the waterline by a certified dive team, flag bridge restoration, continued collections management, and painting projects. The museum has received matching grants from Massachusetts Historical Commission, State Historic Records Advisory Board and Foundation for Advancement in Conservation for that work, she stated.

Elements Academy received $175,000 for the exterior restoration and preservation of the building known as the Wollaston Congregational Church, located at 48 Winthrop Ave. The work will include masonry repairs and waterproofing the building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library was awarded $110,397 for a historic newspaper preservation project. The work aims to preserve primary resources dating back to 1837 and calls for the duplication and

The event kicked off the town's Fourth of July Celebration and this is the second year of Quincy's participation at its neighbor's invitation. The marching unit/firing detail was composed of members of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post No. 294 of The American Legion, Squadron 294 of the Sons of the American Legion, the Morrisette Post Auxiliary, and the William R. Caddy Detachment of The Marine Corps League, assisted by cadets from the Air Force JROTC unit from North Quincy High School. - Cancel subscriptions that you aren't using. It's easy to lose track of what subscription services you are paying for. Forbes reminds consumers to review their subscriptions to ensure they're still using them. If you are signed up for multiple subscriptions, a subscription management app can help you keep track of and manage them.

- Negotiate better prices. It's possible you could get a better rate for things like insurance, cable bills, gym memberships, and credit card interest. Start by being nice to the company rep and "ask if there are any programs or discounts you qualify for," advises CNBC.

- Take advantage of gas price savings. Sign up for fuel reward programs or use fuel comparison apps to find the lowest gas prices in your neighborhood. See these tips for how to save on gas from The Penny Hoarder.

- Watch out for shrinkflation. Some manufacturers won't raise prices; they will put fewer products in the same packaging. Read labels and choose options that give the most value for your dollar.

- Enjoy what you already have. Take a walk with a family member instead of driving to the movie theater. Clean out your closet to rediscover lost items instead of buying new ones. Finish the project you started instead of spending on something different.

- Watch out for scams. Con artists know that shoppers are concerned about prices and will take advantage of the situation. Beware of deals that sound too good to be true. They probably are! Always research unfamiliar vendors to make sure you're dealing with a legitimate business before you make a purchase or give them your personal information.

Access the equity in your home or free up cash monthly Here's how...

Maybe you'd love to access the equity in your home but you're nervous about taking out an adjustable home equity line with interest rates rising. Or maybe you went with a shorter term and that monthly payment has become a burden. This is something that could work for you - refinance into a new 30-year mortgage. With 30-year rates still historically low, it's definitely a home equity loan/line alternative. And also a way to free up cash monthly and make your life easier. Would a new 30-year loan be right for you? It's easy to find out. Apply online or call Angela Blanchard at 617-376-3500. • On July 18, 1925, Volume One of Adolf Hitler's philosophical autobiography "Mein Kampf" is published. It was a blueprint of his agenda for a Third Reich and a clear exposition of the nightmare that would envelope Europe from 1939 to 1945.

beans

As the heat of mid-summer wearies your garden plants, it's not too late to try for another bean crop for fall. Bush beans tend to mature in 45 days, which means planting them in late July will have them ready for picking right before the first frost. Fall-grown beans can be more tender and flavorful than beans grown in the heat of the summer. Make sure to wet your soil thoroughly before planting to help speed up germination.

digitization of historic local newspapers on acetate-based microfilm, Powers said. Newspapers include the Quincy Patriot, Quincy Daily Ledger, Quincy Monitor, Quincy Advertiser, Quincy Aurora, Quincy Evening News and Quincy Enterprise, she wrote.

The Lighthouse Fellowship Church will get $100,000 for work on the historic building located at 65/73 Newbury Ave., known as the Atlantic Memorial Congregational Church. The project will include masonry repairs, construction of a handicap ramp, and reconstruction of the main exterior doors.

The Department of Natural Resources will receive $44,500 for preservation documentation of the South-Tide Mill site. The project will consist of a walkover reconnaissance survey of the upland property, existing conditions and structural survey of granite walls, and a photogrammetric survey of the site, including the building, Powers said.

The department was also awarded $19,554 for various work to be overseen by its staff conservator, including conservation of the Mount Wollaston WWI Memorial, conservation of the Myles Standish Cairn, and Squaw Rock Park tree and stone graffiti mitigation testing.

The final project receiving funds is categorized as open space. The Seaside Gardeners of Squantum will receive $5,000 for continued support of the group's causeway beautification work. The funds will be used for watering of plant beds and purchase of additional plant materials and soil.

Powers said there were no applications submitted under the affordable housing category during the latest round of funding requests.

Quincy's voters adopted the state's Community Preservation Act by referendum in 2006. The CPA fund is financed through a 1 percent surcharge on property taxes. The first $100,000 in assessed value for each residential property is exempt from the surcharge, as are residential properties owned by some seniors and those who qualify for low-income housing. The state also matches a portion of CPA funds in each community that has adopted the act.

MA House Passes Comprehensive Reproductive Rights Legislation

The Massachusetts House of Representatives on June 29th passed comprehensive legislation to further protect reproductive health care and gender-affirming services in the Commonwealth.

Although abortion remains legal in Massachusetts due to the Legislature's efforts in 2020 to codify and expand access, the Massachusetts House took additional efforts to further protect these rights and establish additional safeguards following the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to overturn Roe v. Wade. The bill includes confidentiality measures for providers, mandates insurance coverage for abortion services with no cost sharing, expands access to emergency contraception, and provides legal protections to providers, out-of-state patients, and insurers.

"The Supreme Court's decision to completely overturn Roe v. Wade represents a fundamental attack on women's rights," said House Speaker Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy). "Now, more than ever, it is the responsibility of leaders in Massachusetts to ensure that the Commonwealth can serve as a sanctuary for women seeking reproductive health care, and for providers whose licenses could be at risk because of this recent Supreme Court decision."

"I want to thank Chairs Michlewitz and Day, as well as all my colleagues in the House, for their commitment to protecting a woman's right to choose, and for their hard work that facilitated the passage of this legislation," Mariano added.

"As women's rights face continued attacks from both the Supreme Court and other states, we here in the Commonwealth will continue to not only protect these rights, but expand upon them," said Rep. Aaron Michlewitz (D-Boston), chairperson of the House Committee on Ways & Means. "We will not hesitate to act to protect reproductive rights and to ensure that our providers and patients are protected from being prevented from offering this critical form of healthcare."

"All of our residents deserve safe access to necessary healthcare and now, with that access in jeopardy, the Legislature must protect Massachusetts residents and health practitioners," said Rep. Kate Hogan (D-Stow), Speaker Pro Tempore. "Today the House passed H.4930, a comprehensive response to last week's Supreme Court ruling that codifies access to abortion services, reproductive care, and gender-affirming services and protects the providers of these services."

"Five members of the Supreme Court recently said states can decide whether millions of American women should be treated as second class citizens," said Rep. Michael S. Day (D-Stoneham), House Chairperson of the Joint Committee on the Judiciary.

"Today, we in the Massachusetts House answered that question by reaffirming that our constitution and our laws make clear that women control their own bodies and that we will always step up to protect the fundamental rights of our residents here in the Commonwealth."

"An Act expanding protections for reproductive rights:"

- Allows providers to apply to the Secretary of State to shield the health care professional's address from public disclosure

- Designates reproductive health care and gender-affirming services as legally protected health care activity

- Reaffirms that access to reproductive health care and gender-affirming services are a right secured by the constitution or laws of the Commonwealth

- Requires insurance coverage for abortion and abortion-related care without being subject to deductibles, coinsurance, copayments, or other cost-sharing requirements

- Requires the Department of Public Health (DPH) to issue a statewide standing order to authorize licensed pharmacists to dispense emergency contraception

- Protects providers and out-of-state patients in Massachusetts by:

- Prohibiting the Boards of Registration of various health professions from disciplining or taking adverse action on an application for registration of any person who assists with reproductive health care or gender-affirming services

- Prohibiting Massachusetts law enforcement from providing information related to an investigation or inquiry into legally protected health care services to federal or another state's law enforcement agencies, quasi-law enforcement agencies, or private citizens

- Prohibiting medical malpractice insurers from discriminating against a provider that offers reproductive or gender-affirming health care services

- Protecting Massachusetts residents from efforts to enforce court rulings from other states based on health care activity that is legally protected in Massachusetts

- Prohibiting any Massachusetts court from ordering a person in Massachusetts to give testimony or produce documents for use in connection with any proceeding in an out-of-state tribunal concerning legally protected health care activity

- Protecting Massachusetts residents and providers from lawsuits seeking to penalize health care activities legally protected in Massachusetts

- Prohibiting a justice from issuing a summons for a person in Massachusetts to testify or appear in a court in another state in prosecutions or grand jury investigations related to legally protected health care activity

- Limiting the Governor's authority to surrender persons to acts that would be punishable under Massachusetts law and prohibiting them from surrendering a person charged in another state as a result of engaging in legally protected health care activity

- Updating language from the 2020 ROE Act to ensure that impacted patients are able to receive in-state care

"An Act expanding protections for reproductive rights" (H. 4930) passed the Massachusetts House of Representatives 136-17. It now goes to the Senate for their consideration.

John Quincy Adams Presidential Wreath Laying Ceremony At United First Parish Church July 11

On Monday, July 11th at noon the annual Presidential Wreath Laying Ceremony in celebration of the 255th birthday of President John Quincy Adams will be held at United First Parish Church, the "Church of the Presidents," located at 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

On the birthday of every deceased President there is a wreath presented at the grave of that former President, on behalf of the current President. This year the wreath will be presented on behalf of President Joe Biden by Lieutenant Commander Alicia Ping from the Navy Operational Support Center Quincy.

For decades United First Parish Church has used the tradition of a presidential wreath laying to bring the Quincy community together to reflect on our shared history as "City of the Presidents." The church collaborates with elected leaders, historians, educators, authors, musicians, community and cultural groups, as well as the Navy, to create a unique and celebratory event that honors the legacy of John Quincy Adams and John Adams by encouraging lifelong learning and fostering a commitment to democracy.

The theme for this year's ceremony is "Democracy and Governance of Mutual Respect," inspired by John Quincy Adams' long commitment to building a democratic society, and these words from his Inaugural Address in Washington D.C. as he assumed the Presidency in 1825: "The harmony of the nation is promoted and the whole Union is knit together by the sentiments of mutual respect, the habits of social intercourse, and the ties of personal friendship formed between the representatives of its several parts in the performance of their service at this metropolis." Later in his presidency Adams wrote, "The end of government is the progressive improvement of the condition of the governed."

Speakers include Quincy Mayor Tom Koch, state Sen. John Keenan, Adams National Historical Park Superintendent Marianne Peak, Quincy Historical Society Director Ed Fitzgerald, and Adams family descendent Reid Adams, as well as Jim Petosa, Bill Westland and Rev. Rebecca Froom from United First Parish Church. Music will be provided by the Quincy Choral Society.

John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States of America, was a member of United First Parish Church and is entombed in the Presidential Crypt in the Church alongside his First Lady, Louisa Catherine Adams, and his parents, President John Adams and First Lady Abigail Adams. The congregation was founded in 1639 and has operated a Historical Tours program open to the public since 1976, providing tours of the Presidential Crypt and the historic sanctuary, built in 1828. The congregation is open for tours six days a week (closed on Wednesdays).

The ceremony is open to the public. Historic tours will be available following the ceremony. Masks or face coverings are encouraged but not required inside the historic sanctuary; masks are required in the Presidential Crypt. The building is wheelchair accessible.

Commends Parks Department For Cleaning Pocket Park

On our regular Friday night visit to Burke's Seafood and Danny's Hardware in Norfolk Downs, we parked in the municipal lot at the rear and were pleasantly surprised walking through the area in between—we noticed that the "pocket park" had been scrubbed and planted.

We would like to commend the city's Parks Department for the attention given to this area.

We are sure that more folks will enjoy this area if only for a brief rest.

Don't Hold Up The End Of Life Options Act (H2381)

Since when in our democracy does a proposed law like the the End of Life Options Act (H2381), which a Globe/Suffolk University poll recently showed has 77% public support, have to also have "77% of the House in favor of it, for Speaker Ronald Mariano to give it the green light and bring it to a vote?"

This is what our top legislator was quoted as saying in the Globe on June 12. What's wrong with just a simple majority of 52% or 65% to pass a law that 77% of the people want?

What about heeding the will of the people who want to join 10 other states (Maine, Vermont, New Jersey, etc.) plus Washington D.C. (and other countries like Canada) offer terminally ill people the option of medical aid in dying to avoid needless suffering?

And where were your words of compassion for the many people you represent who are facing, or fear, an end of life scenario of pain and suffering that even the best efforts of hospice and palliative care often can't relieve? And for their loved ones who have to helplessly witness it?

Join me in calling on Speaker Mariano to stop gaslighting and start greenlighting The End of Life Options Act (H2381), and pass it before the end of the legislative session on July 31.

Take care of your constituents and Mass. residents.

NEW POLICEMEN APPOINTED

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin appointed two permanent members of the police department, but neither will serve until after the war; both are in the Army.

The new patrolmen whose police work is temporarily deferred are First Lt. Ralph Hatfield of Squantum and Pvt. Leighton Rogers of Billings Road. Rogers was a second cousin to Mayor Burgin, Hatfield topped the civil service list while Rogers was second.

Mayor Burgin asked for a new civil service list from which to appoint two military substitutes who will serve until Hatfield and Rogers return from the Army.

SECRET CHECK OF RENTS UNDERWAY

A secret rent survey by the federal government — with an unfavorable result meaning the appointment of a federal fair rent administrator for this area — is being carried on in Quincy this week.

While many facts are lacking regarding the survey, it was reported that rents in various parts of the city were being spot-checked. Members of the fair rent committee were told that Quincy was under observation and if rents were not under control within 60 days, after May 1 a federal coordinator would be appointed for this area. At present, rents are frozen as of March 1, 1941.

A biopic of Elvis Presley is an absolutely perfect fit for director Baz Luhrmann. The filmmaker is known for a garish visual style that, while not "ugly" per se (and in fact can be quite beautiful if seen with the right eyes), always screams "excessive." He captured the spirit of flashy rebelliousness in the party scenes in "The Great Gatsby" in 2013 and turned the "Moulin Rouge!" into a paradise of hedonism in 2001. Elvis, or at least his onstage persona, was all about exploiting rebelliousness and hedonism, and looking like the most ambitious kind of eyesore in the process. It's a shame that Elvis and Luhrmann were professionals in different eras, because one wonders what they could have created if they had worked together. As it is, we have to settle for Luhrmann simply creating this lengthy tribute to Elvis.

All the expected pieces of the music biopic are covered here. We follow Elvis (Austin Butler) from his well-meaning early days on the carnival circuit to a successful tour where he picks up some bad habits to superstardom and cockiness to a humbling decline to a roaring comeback to misplaced complacency to the utter destruction of his life. Rise and fall, rise and fall, tragic end. The closest thing I'd say this movie has to an "insight" about Elvis is a scene where he confesses that he fears that he won't be remembered. His fame has been well-established at this point, and if he were thinking more clearly, he couldn't possibly mean what he's saying, but still, it's a powerful reminder that everyone thinks like this sometimes.

The story is told from the point of view of Elvis's manager, "Colonel" Tom Parker (Tom Hanks). Really, all three parts of that name should be in quotation marks with what a phony this guy is. Every stereotype about the greedy, manipulative, criminal manager is on full display with Parker. Come to think of it, Parker himself probably did a lot to helm that stereotype. The movie adds face-fattening makeup and a Dutch accent stolen from "Austin Powers in Goldmember" to make the character even more repulsive. It actually makes sense that he would technically be the main character in this movie. Not because everyone is the hero in their own story, that's to be expected, but because it's so on-brand for him to take something of Elvis's and make it all about him.

The music in the movie has its hit-or-miss moments. Butler is better at capturing Elvis's dance magic and stage presence than his singing voice (then again, was it ever really about the singing?). But there are some memorable performances, made all the more memorable by the funny facial expressions made by screaming female extras. Sometimes the Elvis songs are remixed with hip hop, which works a few times, but probably should have been done more sparingly.

I've been told that, like many biopics, this movie makes Elvis out to be a better person than he actually was. Apparently he did more drugs, was more of a sexual deviant, had a worse attitude, and his integration of Black mannerisms into his act was less "drawing inspiration" and more "cultural appropriation." True, you're just as naïve as the young version of the character if you think he was an angel perverted by cynical forces. But at the same time, you can't expect a PG-13 movie that celebrates Elvis's style and showmanship to paint him in too harsh of a light, even though Colonel Tom no doubt made a mint off of paintings that did just that. Come for the superficial visual style, stay for the superficial visual style. "Elvis" doesn't need to work as a deep movie to deliver on the flair it promises.

Grade: B-

"Elvis" is rated PG-13 for substance abuse, strong language, suggestive material and smoking. Its running time is an appropriately over-indulgent 159 minutes.

Point Webster Play Area 'Long Overdue,' Mariano Says

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new play area with synthetic turf is set to open outside Point Webster Middle School this fall, replacing the macadam surface previously located on site.

The $500,000 project will be funded by the state through its fiscal year 2022 budget. House Speaker Ronald Mariano, a Quincy Point native who went to and taught at the school building, said he approached Mayor Thomas Koch about improving the play area because he was tired of the all-cement grounds outside the school.

"Having spent eight years there as a student, four years there as a teacher and 18 years on the School Committee, I got sick of looking at the school that my family went to — all my brothers and sisters, all my aunts and uncles went to same school because we're all from the same three-block area — that had no grass, that had just cement," Mariano said in a recent interview.

"It's the only school in the inventory in Quincy that you couldn't see a blade of grass. If you wanted to play in the school yard you came home with scrapes and bruises and rashes and every other thing.

"We had the ARPA money in and I got the idea that I'd like to make a change — I'd like to green up the school yard — so I called Tommy and he said he had thought about that himself and that he had a set of plans, or had worked on a set of plans, but then scraped it because he had too many other things going on. So I said, 'well, if I get you the money, can you roll out the plans and see if you could make it work?' He said he would, so we got him the money and he says he's going to do it. He's going to try and get it done by September."

The mayor's plan called for the installation of a synthetic turf playing surface, Mariano said, calling it a "great addition for that neighborhood."

"I'm excited about it. I think it's long overdue — way long overdue," the House speaker added.

"When Danny [Raymond] and I were on the School Committee, we tried to get something done and it was always a little bit too expensive for the times that we were in so we couldn't get it done. Sitting in this position, I have the opportunity to do it, so we're going to do it."

In a statement earlier this spring when the project was first announced, Koch said he was thrilled about the improvements to the school grounds.

"These improvements will provide the kind of dedicated and safe outdoors play space that is so important to the growth and enjoyment of our young people," the mayor said.

"I'm thrilled our students at Point Webster and kids throughout the neighborhood will have this great resource, and I am incredibly grateful to Speaker Mariano for a lifetime of commitment to the Quincy Public Schools that in ways large and small has done so much over the years to make it among the very best public school systems in the commonwealth."

Supt. Kevin Mulvey said the project would provide exceptional recreation for students and families.

"The Quincy Public Schools and in particular the Point Webster Middle School community are very grateful to Speaker Mariano and Mayor Koch for their generous support of this very important and much-needed improvement to the grounds of Point Webster," Mulvey said in a statement.

"This project will give our students and families an exceptional recreation space that will bring many years of enjoyment to them and the entire community."

Sour Cream Coffee Cake

By MARIE

Today's recipe for sour cream coffee cake is one that is both delicious and easy to make. You can ice the cake or leave plain — either way it tastes great with coffee or tea.

This recipe also makes for a great birthday cake for those who don't like cake that is overly frosted. This cake can grace any table — whether at a dinner or gathering and it's also a lovely dessert on a holiday table.

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a tube pan or bundt cake with vegetable oil or olive oil.

Ingredients and directions for cake:

- 2 sticks of unsalted butter — must be room temperature
- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 and ½ cups of sugar
- 3 large eggs
- 2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 generous cup of sour cream

Streusel Topping Recipe:

- ½ cup flour
- ¼ cup light brown sugar
- 4 tablespoons of unsalted butter
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Combine all streusel ingredients, mix well, cutting the butter into very small pieces.

This can also be mixed in a food processor just until crumbly.

Directions for cake and putting cake together:

In a mixing bowl and using an electric mixture beat the butter, sugar, eggs vanilla on high until well blended — this takes approximately 5 minutes.

Then add the flour one cup at a time, mixing well after each addition.

Add the baking powder, baking soda and cinnamon, and mix well. Batter will be thick.

Place half of the batter in cake pan.

Top with a generous amount of streusel topping but leaving enough streusel mix for top.

Then top with remaining batter and spread evenly, this takes a minute.

Then top with remaining streusel and bake for 60 or 70 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean.

If you would like to ice this cake — icing recipe is below.

Icing:

- 1 and ½ cups of powdered sugar (confectionary sugar)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 5 tablespoons of milk or heavy cream

Mix together all ingredients well and pour over cake.

Homemade Dairy-Free Creamer

By SUZIE

Here is a recipe by Danielle Walker that I love better than any other store-bought creamer.

No "gums" or carrageenan, or any other nonsense ingredients. This will keep for about a week in fridge.

For those of you who struggle with dairy, this is a winner. Cashew pieces are much less expensive than whole cashews.

12 ounces raw cashews, or cashew pieces

- 3 pitted medjool dates
- 4 cups filtered cold water
- ½ teaspoon organic vanilla, small pinch sea salt
- 1/2 can full fat coconut milk, shaken up to mix the fat with the water

Instructions:

Place the cashews and dates in a bowl and fill it with enough hot water to cover the nuts.

Soak for 1 hour then drain and rinse the cashews and dates. Add them to a blender with 4 cups fresh, filtered water. Blend on high for 60 seconds, until very smooth.

Place a piece of cheesecloth in a mesh (or use a nut milk bag which is much easier. I order mine on Amazon) and pour the cashew milk through to strain out some of the pureed cashews. Gather the cheesecloth together and squeeze to release the remaining liquid.

Return the strained liquid to the blender. Add the vanilla, salt, and coconut milk. Blend for 30 seconds to incorporate.

Store in an airtight container in the refrigerator for 1 week.

Mariano Unopposed On Ballot, Expects To Continue As Speaker

By SCOTT JACKSON

Rep. Ronald Mariano will be unopposed on the ballot this fall and expects to have enough votes to continue serving as the speaker of the House of Representatives in his new term that begins in January.

Helping the state's offshore wind industry get up and running will be one the Quincy Democrat's key priorities over the next two years.

Mariano has served in the House since winning a 1991 special election. He was elected speaker of the House in December 2020 and reelected as speaker the next month, at the start of the legislature's current term. Mariano recently told The Sun he expects he will continue serving as speaker during the new term that begins next January.

"I think I'll have the votes — I'll be able to maintain the speakership going into the next [term]," he said.

Mariano, age 74, said he has not decided whether he will run for reelection again in 2024.

"I will make a determination sometime in the next couple of years about whether or not this is the end," he said.

Later on, when asked if this would be his last go around, Mariano responded "It's getting there," adding that he still enjoys the work he does on Beacon Hill.

"A lot depends on how I feel. I still have a lot of energy, I can still do the job, I love the folks I work with. I love solving problems — I love the challenge of dealing with all these divergent groups and trying to get to some agreement," Mariano said.

RONALD MARIANO

"That's what I do best, and I think that's what was recognized — putting health care stuff together, now putting wind stuff together, offshore wind. It's always a new challenge, it's always something different, and you just don't know what you're going to learn."

"I just went toe-to-toe with Mass General Brigham on their expansion and we ended up forcing them to capitulate and reduce their expansion because of the impact it would have on total medical expenses for the commonwealth. Those little victories are nice, and you know you're doing something that's important."

"My biggest regret is that I couldn't save Quincy Hospital," he added. "There were just too many factors working against us. We could never, never put a team together to step up and save us."

When asked if the market could support a new community hospital in Quincy in the future, Mariano said it was unlikely.

"I think if anything it's going the other way. It's shrinking. You're starting to see the expansion of some of the major teaching hospitals who dominate the marketplace between Mass General Brigham...and now BI Lahey. You've got others, like Tufts, looking to expand," he said.

"It's actually going the other way and offsite surgery centers, which we have a couple already, are stepping in and filling the local void, but it still isn't enough because there is no overnight stuff and if you need anything of any involvement — anything that's out of the ordinary — they've got to ship you in town to another hospital, because they can't do it on site."

As for the next two years, Mariano said he would like to help the state develop its offshore wind industry. The South Coast in particular is primed to be a hub for wind power, he said.

"What I want to see established, probably what I'll be doing in the next two years, is reinforcing the beginnings of the offshore wind industry. We have a tremendous opportunity to change the reliance on fossil fuels and to meet the deadlines of 2050 on fossil-fuel consumption," Mariano said.

"It's like sitting on oil wells in Saudi Arabia. The offshore winds in Fall River and New Bedford are the highest prevailing winds, I think it's rated in the 95th percentile along...either coast, east or west, so if we don't take advantage of it, we're crazy."

"It's an industry that is very successful in Europe. Because the shelf off the coast of Fall River and New Bedford is flat for miles and miles, you can put the windmills out 75 to 100 miles so you will never even see them from the shore."

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty – I'm Getting Spouse Benefits – What Happens To My Own?

By RUSSELL GLOOR

National Social Security Advisor
at the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I was born in late 1951. When I retired 5 years ago, I was made aware that my own Social Security benefit was less than half of my husband's SS Benefit. So, I chose to take half of his. What happens to my undispensed SS dollars? On the off chance the balance increases beyond the amount I am now collecting, can I eventually switch to my own full SS amount? Signed: Curious Senior

Dear Curious Senior: Much depends on exactly how you claimed your SS benefits five years ago and your age when you claimed. Because you were born in 1951, if you had reached your full retirement age (FRA) of 66 when you claimed SS five years ago and your husband was already collecting his benefits, you had the option to file a "restricted application for spousal benefits only" which would have enabled you to collect only your spouse benefit while letting your own benefit continue to grow. But if you were not yet 66 when you claimed, the "restricted application" wasn't available to you, so you are now receiving your own benefit plus an additional amount to bring your payment to your spousal amount.

I expect that the latter is the case (that you didn't file a "restricted application"), which would mean that your current payment amount consists of two parts – your personal benefit (from your own lifetime work record) plus a "spousal boost" to bring your payment to your spousal entitlement. Except for the restricted application, Social Security always pays your own benefit amount first and then supplements your own benefit with an additional amount to give you what you're entitled to as a spouse. Thus, your personal benefits aren't "undispensed" – you're already getting them, plus a spousal supplement.

Just to complete the picture, if you did file a "restricted application" at age 66, then your own benefit continued to grow until you were 70 (at which point it reached maximum). The growth amount would have been 8% per year additional benefit, so at age 70 your own benefit would have been 32% more than your FRA amount. If you know what your own FRA benefit amount was, then increase that by 32% to see if your own amount is now higher and, if so, contact Social Security to apply for your own higher benefit.

If you don't know what your personal FRA amount was and/or are uncertain if you filed a restricted application, you'll need to contact Social Security directly to see if you're entitled to any additional amount based on your own lifetime work record. You can contact Social Security at either the national center. (1-800-772-1213) or at your local office (find the number at www.ssa.gov/locator). If you are currently getting spouse benefits only under a restricted application and your personal benefit is now higher, since you'll soon be 71 you should request six months of retroactive benefits when you switch from the restricted application to your own benefit.

MA House Passes $10.9 Billion Transportation, Infrastructure Bill

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has passed a transportation and infrastructure bill authorizing $10.9 billion for projects, including $400 million for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) to address ongoing safety concerns identified by the Federal Transit Administration's Safety Management Inspection and $250 million for the East-West passenger rail project.

"Ensuring that the Commonwealth's transportation infrastructure is adequately funded is a top priority for the House, which is why I'm proud of the legislation passed today," said House Speaker Ronald J. Mariano (D-Quincy). "In addition to significant funding for road-way and bridge projects, this bill also recognizes the importance of providing further support for the MBTA in their ongoing effort to address safety concerns, and for the ever-important East-West Rail project. I want to thank Chairs Michlewitz, Straus, and Gregoire, as well as all my colleagues in the House, for the hard work required to get this done."

"This legislation provides important investments in our roads, bridges, and transportation systems," said Rep. Tackey Chan (D-Quincy). "I'm especially proud to have worked with the Quincy delegation to secure $7 million in funding for the Sea Street construction project to improve traffic, reconstruct sidewalks and ensure ADA compliance, and prioritize pedestrian and cyclist safety."

"The funding secured in this bond bill will provide much-needed support to our roads and bridges, as well as necessary updates to our public transit infrastructure," said Representative Bruce Ayers (D-Quincy). "Thousands of Quincy residents depend on a reliable, resilient MBTA, and this funding will continue our commitment towards the improvements that benefit our neighborhoods and our constituents."

Other highlights of the bill include:

- $2,812,457,157 for projects on the interstate and non-interstate federal highway system

- $1,270,000,000 for non-federally aided roadway and bridge projects and for the nonparticipating portion of federally aided projects

- $85,000,000 for pavement and surface conditions on non-federally aided roadways

- $25,000,000 for pavement and surface conditions on municipal roadways

- $20,000,000 for grants to municipalities under the Complete Streets Funding Program

- $25,000,000 for grants to Transportation Management Associations pending on Beacon Hill would replace transmission lines at the now-closed Brayton Point power plant in Somerset on the South Coast.

"We have a transmission station that just shut down in Brayton Point. We're going to fix that," Mariano said. "We're currently negotiating a bill with the Senate today that would fix that station and replace all the transmission lines because right now, no matter what we use – if we use solar or wind and we put everything up today, we couldn't get the electricity from the source to homes because the transmission lines are so outdated. They were all built in the '50s and they just won't handle the high speed today."

Later on in the interview, Mariano suggested the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point could one day be used for either the manufacture or laying down of turbines.

"I've been trying to interest some of the offshore wind folks," Mariano responded when asked about the shipyard. "I think that it would be a great place if we could get a turbine company to go in. I've been in contact with some folks who are in the business to see if we can generate any interest from GE or any of the other large turbine manufactures to use that area as a lay-down area or as a production area."

The new Fore River Bridge, he added, would make it easier for the shipyard to be used for such a purpose.

"The fact of the matter is the Fore River Bridge is far more functional than it was with the old bascule bridge," Mariano said. "It opens faster, it's higher, it's wider, it's easier to get in and out."

Daniel Quirk, who owns the shipyard, will have the final decision on the future of the site, Mariano noted.

"It's really a private decision – it's Quirk's private decision – but I think for the area it would bring some jobs back into the area," he said.

City Taking Step Back On Furnace Brook Plans

More Than 60 People Attend 2-Hour Workshop

By SCOTT JACKSON

Neighborhood residents and golfers alike suggested dozens of ideas they want to see incorporated into plans for improvements to Furnace Brook Golf Course and Forbes Hill Park during a community workshop.

More than 60 people attended the two-hour workshop held on June 28 inside the clubhouse at the course on Reservoir Road. David Murphy, Quincy's commissioner of natural resources, said the city was taking a step back from its initial plans for the site, which were presented at a previous community meeting.

"This isn't like our first meeting. Many of you – I recognize your faces – were here in February when we presented a plan and got reaction on a plan. We're actually taking a step back from that based on a lot of the community feedback that we received," Murphy said at the outset of the June 28 meeting. "Our goal tonight is to have a workshop, a values workshop, about what the community wants to see from the golf course, from the park, from the relationship, and how it impacts the community at large.

"That's the goal tonight. I'm not here to present a sketch of a building or a park or anything else like that. We want to hear about the values that should inform the design process.

We've actually put our process on pause to get more feedback based on the type of feedback that we were getting."

"Originally, our goal was to go before the council and seek an appropriation in the early half of this year, but we said we better take a time out, we better take a pause, we need more community feedback on this, we're not where we need to be," Murphy added. "Working with many folks in the community, we've taken a deep breath, we've taken a step back, and here we are this evening."

The feedback gathered at the meeting will help inform the design of the improvements for the course and park, Murphy explained. As part of that plan, the city is seeking to find common ground among the various stakeholders involved in the process.

"From this meeting, we go back to the design process. We take a look at the park, we take a look at the clubhouse, we take a look at the relationship with the two and the community, and then we come back here at some point with the presentation with actual plans and get further reaction. That won't be the last meeting either. There is a process in place that is going to allow everybody to have a seat at the table," Murphy said.

"Now I don't think everybody here is here for the same reason. I think there are some people here tonight that are mad we haven't started construction. I think there are some people here tonight that want us to do no construction. We've got to find those places in between as a community and those values that are shared that we can use to inform whatever process we do going forward."

After Murphy's remarks, those in attendance were sorted into six groups at random to ensure that each group included a mix of viewpoints and were asked to share values and principles they want to see included in plans for the course and park. Staff from the engineering consulting firm Fuss & O'Neill led the discussions at each table.

The table moderated by Arnold Robinson, the firm's regional director of planning, featured several area residents, members of the Friends of Forbes Hill Park, as well as a 40-year member of the golf club.

Group members said they wanted Forbes Hill Park to be maintained as a place where children can play, another said the site should be a gathering place for the neighborhood "in the widest sense," the club member said it would be important to keep a functional golf course on site, and a second person added that it be made accessible to all. Group members also said the upkeep of the park and golf course both need to be improved.

Ideas for a new clubhouse were discussed by group members. The new clubhouse, one person said, should serve as a shared amenity for both the park and golf course, while others said it could be used to host community events. Those at the table agreed that the new clubhouse should not be used to host functions like weddings.

Other suggestions for the new clubhouse included constructing it within the same footprint of the existing clubhouse but taller to maximize views, providing space for a golf simulator that can provide a new revenue stream during winter months, building a new outdoor firepit and deck space, and raising the height of the building so golf carts and concessions could be located at ground level under the clubhouse.

Group members also discussed the future of the golf course itself. Several said it should be made more accessible to the public, which could mean making more tee times available to non-members and providing club rentals on site. Youth golf programs were also identified as a priority. One person also suggested a tow rope should be run during the winter to make it easier for skiers and sledgers to get to the top of the hill – one was formerly located on site.

As to the adjoining Forbes Hill Park, group members said the tennis and basketball courts should be replaced with new ones, said that the lighting on site should be improved, and suggested a walking path could be created around the perimeter. Group members also said they liked that the park is not used for organized sports, like Little League, which keeps noise levels down in the surrounding neighborhood.

There were several suggestions made relative to the trees on site. Members of the group said it was important to keep tree cover at both the park and golf course, called for a tree survey to be conducted, said tired and old trees should be replaced, and suggested invasive plants should be removed.

As for the project itself, group members said the city needs to be transparent about the plans and suggested a third party be brought in to review items like planned drainage improvements.

One person also suggested a model should be created showing the plans and that they be staked out within the park to make it easier for community members to understand them.

Following the break-out session, which lasted about 45 minutes, the moderators from each table presented their tables' values and principles to the larger group. Many of those values and principles were similar to the ones discussed at Robinson's table. There were also different values and principles discussed at those tables.

At least two of the groups said financial transparency was important, in terms of the proposed improvements to the park and golf course, as well as the annual expenses and revenues associated with the golf course.

Dogs were another point of discussion among several of the groups, with some people suggesting there should be a space for dogs at the park – either on- or off-leash – while others said they should not be allowed at all.

Other suggestions raised by the groups included limiting what type of alcohol is served on site to discourage drunk driving, limiting the operating hours for the restaurant on site and the golf course, building a parking garage under the first floor of the new clubhouse, creating a new pollinator garden or community garden, adding new bocce courts on site, opening up the tower on site as an observation deck, and bringing in goats to eat poison ivy.

Following the workshop, Ryan and Sarah Edwards of the Friends of Forbes Hill Park described the session as positive and said it revealed common ground between the various stakeholders.

"It was positive," Ryan Edwards said. "I think it actually probably revealed much common ground... more shared values in design than many of us probably thought coming into it."

"I would agree with that," Sarah Edwards added. "There were surprising comments from others that said, 'actually we do have a lot in common,' so that is very positive."

"There are still contentious issues that need to be resolved, so there is a big dot, dot, dot at the end of this evening, which is really up to the decision makers themselves – how do they take this information and actually translate it and communicate with us in a way they haven't been able to do yet."

Moving forward, Sarah

Edwards said she would like to see different options put forward for the community to consider.

"I hope we see a range of scenarios that are possible, and I hope we get many more meetings like this that can be facilitated so that we move forward," she said. "This is the easy part. Now we have to start to help make decisions and really prioritize our values and for that I really hope they continue to engage with the community."

Jenn McDonough, a resident of nearby Wollaston Hill, said transparency would help the process as it advances.

"I think it was productive," she said of the workshop. "Of course, you have people that are really very passionate for either side. I don't think there has to be division."

"I think...if there is respectfully transparency for everything that is going on, I think it's good, so everyone can be happy with preserving the little oasis on the hill."

The Massachusetts House of Representatives on June 29 passed legislation limiting the use of step therapy protocols, a process by which insurance companies refuse to pay for the prescription drugs prescribed by a patient's health care provider until the patient first tries cheaper, and oftentimes ineffective, alternatives.

The legislation establishes exceptions a patient can use to avoid their insurer's step therapy protocol and requires both MassHealth and commercial insurers to provide a clear and transparent process for patients and their care team to request an exception.

"A top priority of the House is to ensure that every resident of the Commonwealth has access to quality, affordable health care, but controlling costs should never come at the expense of positive patient outcomes," said House Speaker Ronald J. Mariano (D-Quincy). "This legislation helps to achieve that goal by ensuring that patients in Massachusetts can circumvent step therapy protocols in instances where the process will result in delayed access to the only adequate medication. I want to thank Chairman John Lawn, as well as all my colleagues in the House, for their commitment to improving our health care system, and for the hard work required to get this done."

Cara Pekarick Recognized By GBH As Education Leader

GBH announces Cara Pekarick from North Quincy High School as a member of the 2022 class of educators selected for the PBS Digital Innovator All-Star Program – honoring classroom changemakers who offer fresh ideas and bold approaches to supporting their students' growth and learning.

Nominated by their local PBS stations, 20 educators were chosen from across the country.

Pekarick is a veteran science teacher at North Quincy High School (NQHS), where she combined her background in marine science with a love for teaching to educate students in biology and zoology. During her 16 years at NQHS, Pekarick has served as an assistant volleyball coach, National Honor Society adviser, and member of the school's Culture and Climate Committee.

Pekarick was named the 2018 Massachusetts Teacher of the Year. She also served as a PolarTREC educator during a 2016 research trip to Antarctica. Pekarick served as a GBH/NEPM Educator Ambassador from 2020-2022. She holds a MA in Secondary Education (biology) from UMASS Boston and is currently working towards a doctoral degree at Walden University.

The PBS Digital Innovator All-Star program brings together a community of PreK-12th grade educators who are innovators and leaders both in and outside of the classroom. Specifically, Digital Innovator All-Stars are selected from a cohort of educators who are doing extraordinary work supporting student learning by integrating media and digital technology in their teaching environments and inspiring students to use these tools in responsible, effective and empowering ways.

"We are thrilled that Cara has been selected as a PBS Digital Innovator All-Star," said Seeta Pai, executive director of Education at GBH. "Cara has consistently excelled in teaching, bringing innovative ideas to her work in the classroom and inspiring her students to reach beyond what is expected. We are looking forward to working closely with her in the upcoming school year."

In partnership with GBH, Pekarick will spend the 2022-2023 school year deepening engagement among students, families, educators, schools and GBH.

House Passes Legislation To Reform Step Therapy Protocols

patients," said Health Care Financing Committee Chair John Lawn (D-Watertown). "Under the leadership of Speaker Mariano and in collaboration with my House colleagues, patient advocates, and insurers, this legislation balances the need to manage utilization and control costs of expensive treatments with the moral imperative to protect patients who need life-saving treatments. Thanks to this bill, patients will get the right drug at the right time without delay."

The legislation outlines four different circumstances that trigger the patient exception process, including:

1. The required treatment will harm the patient,
2. The required treatment is expected to be ineffective,

3. The patient previously tried the required treatment, or similar treatment, and it was ineffective or harmed the patient,
4. The patient is stable on a current treatment, and switching treatments will harm the patient.

Additional highlights of the legislation include:

- A requirement that MassHealth and commercial insurers adopt a "continuity of coverage" policy to ensure patients do not experience any delay in accessing a treatment when requesting a step therapy exemption.
- A requirement that MassHealth and commercial insurers approve or deny a step therapy exemption request within three business days, or within one business day if a delay would cause harm to the patient.

- A requirement that commercial carriers annually report data related to step therapy exemption requests and related coverage determinations to the Division of Insurance.

- The creation of a commission on step therapy protocols tasked with studying, assessing, and bi-annually reporting on the implementation of step therapy process reforms made in this legislation.

"An Act Relative to Step Therapy and Patient Safety" (H.4929) passed the House of Representatives 153-0. The legislation now heads to the Senate for their consideration.

Shopping For A Generator: Things To Know

Increasingly, consumers are turning to generators for power in emergency situations, because the world is unpredictable. Year-round weather challenges are now the norm with snow, ice, wind, tornadoes, hurricanes and record-breaking rain and flooding occurring throughout the year and no longer just confined to a season.

"Consumers want and need reliable power. When the electricity goes out, generators keep your home or business humming with light and power," said Kris Kiser, President and CEO of the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute (OPEI).

"Today's generators offer a variety of features, and there is a product for every need," said Kiser. "While shopping for your generator, consider other equipment that could be useful in cleaning up after challenging weather such as a water pump, chain saw or pole pruner. And don't forget outdoor-rated extension cords and fuel cans."

Tips from OPEI for safe generator use:

• Consider what you need. When purchasing a generator, determine how many kilowatts are needed for essential items (charging family cell phones, a refrigerator, etc.) during an emergency.

• Research generators online before you buy. Talk with the staff at the store or ask questions online. Discuss safety features and ask about manufacturer fueling and care instructions. Generators offer a variety of features. Circuit-breaker-protected outlets will guard against generator overload. A larger fuel tank will provide extra running time. Integrated fuel gauges will help keep tabs on fuel levels and prevent power interruptions. Low tone mufflers make for quieter operation. Fold-down handles and wheels can make it easier to move your generator.

• Keep an outdoor-rated extension cord on hand.

Be sure it is long enough to place the generator a safe distance from your home, and is certified to carry the generator's power load.

• Identify where you will put the generator.

Place the generator outside and away from windows, doors, and vents that could allow carbon monoxide to come indoors. Never put a generator in your home, garage, porch or breezeway. Give portable generators plenty of room for ventilation. Determine now how you will secure the generator.

• Install a carbon monoxide detector.

Add this

safety device to your home and be sure to keep extra batteries on hand for it.

• Keep generators dry.

Before a storm hits, identify how to cover and vent the generator. Buy model-specific tents or generator covers online, at home centers or a hardware store.

• Have the right fuel on hand before a storm hits.

Use an appropriate container designed to hold fuel that seals well.

• Store fuel in a safe place away from heat sources and out of the reach of children. Label the can with the date of purchase and the ethanol content. Check filled cans regularly and replenish them if needed. Remember fuel more than 30 days old should not be used in any outdoor power equipment and can phase separate.

• Use the type of fuel recommended by the generator manufacturer. It is illegal to use any fuel with more than 10% ethanol in outdoor power equipment (for more information on proper fueling for outdoor power equipment visit www.LookBeforeYouPump.com).

For safety information and to find out which manufacturers make various outdoor power equipment products, go to www.opei.org.

Golf Tournament Raises Over $101,000 For Veteran's Fund

A grand total of $101,455 was raised on June 10th when NeighborWorks Housing Solutions, the leading housing service provider in southern Massachusetts, hosted its 23rd annual Mulligan Golf Tournament – far exceeding its $80,000 goal.

All proceeds from the tournament, which was held at Brookmeadow Country Club in Canton and attracted more than 150 golfers, will again support the NHS Veteran's Fund to provide resources and assistance to veterans and their families in NHS housing.

This year's Mulligan Golf Tournament was the most successful to date, due in part to the number of sponsors who stepped up and supported the event this year. Leading the way was Curtis Construction Company, a full-service construction management company based in Stoughton, serving as the Presenting "Tips" Sponsor.

"This is one of my favorite events of the year," said John Curtis, CEO of Curtis Construction. "We love supporting this fun event that provides real support for formerly homeless veterans and their families. Housing for veterans and their families is greatly needed, especially in our region. I am proud to partner with NeighborWorks Housing Solutions to help veterans who need a home."

Additional sponsors included "Sweet Spot" sponsors Klein Hornig, LLP, Atlantic Mechanical Contractors, NEI General Contracting, and Protiviti. NEI General Contracting and Dedham Savings sponsored the tournament's golf carts. Patrons also showed their support for veterans by honoring local veterans throughout the golf course.

Golfers were treated to engaging games during the day, including par 3 poker, a dice toss, and a wildly popular corn hole game. Following the tournament, the golfers and guests were invited to join a post-event luncheon, where awards and raffles were announced. Attendees also heard from a local veteran who, through permanent housing owned and operated by NHS, has been able to finally find stability and access the services he needs to stay safe, healthy, and housed.

"Mother Nature was working with us during this much anticipated and enjoyable day," said Robert Corley, CEO of NeighborWorks Housing Solutions. "We're grateful to the many golfers and sponsors who came out to support the veterans and their families in our communities and we are thrilled with the unprecedented amount of funds raised."

Planning is already underway for the 24th annual Mulligan Tournament, which is scheduled for June of 2023.

Scam Targets Facebook Marketplace Sellers

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Watch out when selling big-ticket items on Facebook Marketplace. Scammers have a new trick up their sleeves! According to BBB Scam Tracker reports, be wary of phony buyers who "need" you to upgrade your Zelle or another digital wallet app to accept money from them.

How the scam works

You list a big-ticket item worth several hundred dollars on Facebook Marketplace. You are quickly contacted by a buyer who wants to pay using a peer-to-peer payment app. Recent BBB Scam Tracker reports reference Zelle, but this scam could also work with CashApp, Venmo (a BBB Accredited Business), or another similar service.

Shortly after receiving the payment, you get an email, supposedly from Zelle. Allegedly, the buyer paid via a Zelle "business account." Now, you also need to upgrade your account to business status to accept the transfer. To do so, the buyer will need to send you another $300. They are happy to do you a favor - if you promise to refund them. One scam victim reported this experience: "I received an email from zelle@bank-confirmedpayment.com explaining that the funds were waiting, but the buyer had to send an additional $300 in order to upgrade my account because the transaction was over $600, and I would need a business account." The scammer then "sent" the extra funds and included screenshots of his Zelle app with the money deducted from his account. Then, he started pressuring the victim into repaying him: "He was very upset and persistent that I needed to pay him back for the fees that he incurred on my behalf."

If you refund the scammer, you'll quickly realize that they never sent you any money in the first place. You'll be out a few hundred dollars, and the scammer will disappear.

How to avoid scams when selling online:

- Don't trust anyone willing to overpay you. Unless your item is rare and you receive multiple offers, be wary of buyers offering you more than your asking price. Consider it a red flag if someone is quick to send you more money than you are asking.

- Check email addresses carefully. If you seem to have received an email from Zelle or another payment app, double-check the email address. Scammers use fake email addresses that are similar to official ones.

- Get to know payment app policies before you use them. If someone claims you need a business account to accept payments, check the app's official website or contact customer service to find out if the claim is true. Scammers often make up fake policies to trick their victims.

- Report scams to Facebook Marketplace. If you spot a seller trying to pull off a scam, report them. Your report can help protect other unsuspecting sellers.

Quincy Native Appointed New Board President At Bridgton Academy

After seven years of service on the Bridgton Academy Board of Trustees, Quincy native Vic DiGravio has been elected to serve as its president.

DiGravio succeeds Dr. Mark Carlson '87 who officially completed his last meeting as Board President in June. DiGravio and his family have been long-time supporters of Bridgton Academy located in Maine.

While DiGravio is not himself an alumnus, his father, Vic DiGravio, Jr., was an incredibly proud member of the Class of 1959.

"I am honored to have been elected as Board president," DiGravio said. "Bridgton Academy is a remarkable institution with incredibly talented faculty and staff who are dedicated to making a difference in the lives of young men. Bridgton's future is bright.

The entire board is looking forward to the upcoming school year."

DiGravio joined the Bridgton Board of Trustees in 2015, immediately bringing his knowledge of organizational leadership and finance to the table. His passion for the mission of Bridgton, along with his ability to bring people together in shared purpose, will help to support the Academy and its Board of Trustees as they move forward into the Academy's 215th year.

"The Academy has traditionally had strong board leadership, and this is especially true with Vic beginning his tenure as Board president," said Head of School Martin Mooney. "He has been one of the most engaged and thoughtful trustees I have ever worked with, and I am deeply grateful for Vic's leadership and good counsel as the Board Finance Chair, especially these last two years as we navigated the financial fallout of the COVID era. Under Vic's guidance, the Academy has prospered during this time. I am eager to get started in earnest with Vic in this new role, and very optimistic about the future."

DiGravio is a graduate of Connecticut College and earned his master's degree in public administration from the Harvard Kennedy School. His career has included work in government, public policy, and behavioral and mental health care.

DiGravio currently serves as the president of Riverside Community Care, a nonprofit organization based in Massachusetts. A Quincy native, DiGravio and his family currently live in Milton.

On Tuesday, June 28, Mayor Thomas Koch and the City of Quincy held a dedication ceremony at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower at Marina Bay.

Staff Sgt. Robert Phillips, USA/MIA from Quincy, MA was remembered and honored with a permanent place on the Clock Tower wall with remarks by John Magnarelli, USA.

Koch honored Master of Ceremonies Lt. Thomas A. Bolinder, ret. QPD/USMC and the late Lawrence M. Cornhole Tourney Benefits Mental Health Education Programs

Quincy-based Matthew's Crew, Inc. held its second Annual Fundraising Cornhole Tournament June 26 on the campus of Fontbonne in Milton.

Matthew's Crew is a non-profit organization created after the passing of 17-year-old Matthew Roper from suicide after a valiant battle against depression in 2020. Suicide is the second leading cause of death in 10-24 year-olds at this time.

Matthew's Crew works to raise funds to help integrate mental health education programs into local schools and support various mental health initiatives. This is just one way Matthew's Crew is working to help change the trajectory of mental illness in children and young adults.

Boston Baggo Co. ran a seamless event where over 50 teams came out in 90-plus degree temperatures for a Battle of the Bags and to compete for the 2022 Cornhole title. Participants ranged in age from 10-70, as well as spectators of all ages. In the end it was Team Kobra Kia, Sean Conway and Mike Bryan, both of Braintree, who won the event, donated their $500 winnings back to Matthew's Crew, and promised to return next year to defend their new title.

As part of the day's events, Matthew's Crew presented a check for $1,500 to Judy Duarte, school nurse at Plymouth County Intermediate School for the continued development and programming for their school's chapter of The Yellow Tulip Project, a youth-driven movement committed to smashing the stigma around mental illness. Nurse Judy learned of YTP at the Matthew's Crew Cornhole Tournament last year from its Fontbonne Chapter, and has grown the program in her school in just one year, being named as a "template for all future YTP middle school programs" by the organization's executive director, Suzanne Fox.

This year, Matthew's

Crew was joined at the tournament by NAMI (National Alliance on Mental Illness) and Aspire Health Alliance (based in Quincy and Braintree). The Samaritans were also in attendance, offering free shirts and gear promoting their new teen support text line "Hey Sam." These highly respected organizations provided information about services and mental health education within our own communities. The day was rounded out with food trucks from Fasano's Catering and The Cookie Monster. about Matthew's Crew, visit their website at: Matthews-crew.org. For more information

Retirees Are Going Back To Work – Some To Supplement Income, Others To Feel Productive

By JOHN GRIMALDI

More senior citizens are saying, "I'm too young to retire." Some simply can't afford to retire; others remain in the workforce because it makes them feel productive. In fact, the Bureau of Labor Statistics says that by 2028, nearly one in four seniors 65 years old and older will be working. They'll be staying on the job or they'll come out of retirement in search of work that can give them a sense of accomplishment.

The senior living company, Provision Living, conducted a survey of more than 1,000 seniors between the ages of 65 and 85 who were working full time or part time. The poll found that 47% of respondents wished they could retire but were still working to make ends meet. Meanwhile, 53% said they chose to stay on the job, full time or part time, because they could. Among the old timers who were still working, most of them -- 45% -- said they enjoy it, 18% said they would be bored were it not for their jobs and six percent work for social engagement.

A more recent poll conducted last month by CNBC focused on men and women who quit or lost their jobs during the height of the pandemic, among them a significant number of retirees. It found that 94% of them would consider getting back to work but only for the right job and the right pay.

Meanwhile, 68% of retirees who participated in the survey said they would consider getting back to work for the right pay and a flexible work schedule.

There was a time when older workers found it hard to find a job. These days, however, hiring seniors seems to be a trend. The Great Senior Living website reports that "many employers now actively look to hire seniors. More and more of them are starting to recognize that experienced and mature workers often have strengths that some younger workers lack. For example, many older workers exhibit strengths like loyalty, a strong work ethic and a good attitude."

The online job site, Indeed.com offers advice for seniors who are deciding to go back to work. "If you're returning to work out of a desire to keep busy, interact with your community or explore a new career field, your job out of retirement may look different from your previous career. This can be an exciting opportunity to discover new occupations or develop existing hobbies. If you're an avid gardener, you could explore part-time employment at a local gardening center. If you're a golf enthusiast, consider applying to a sporting goods store or golf course ... Those with extensive experience in an industry may even choose to capitalize on their background and begin an independent venture. Starting your own business can be an exciting opportunity."

BBB Scam Alert: Fake Events, Phony Tickets Take Festival Goers By Surprise

By BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

Many people are looking forward to fun festivals this summer. As usual, scammers are taking advantage of the building excitement. This time, they are cashing in with phony tickets—and even fake events.

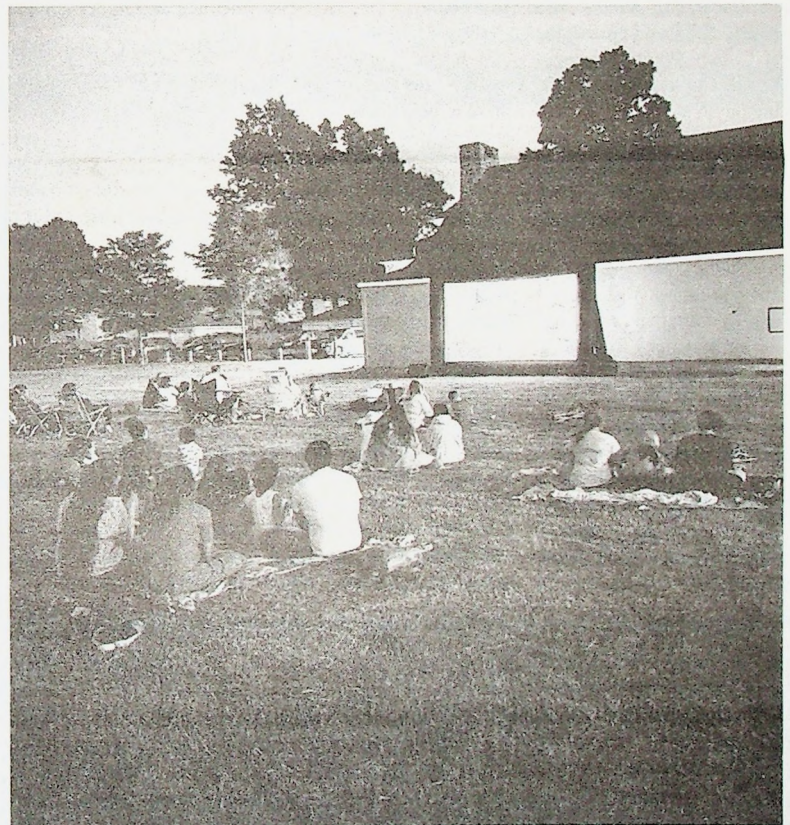

How the scam works

You see a fantastic deal on tickets to a summer festival in your area, usually through a link on social media. The event promises live music, all-you-can-eat meals, craft beer or wine, or other fun activities.

When you click the social media link, it takes you to a professional website with fantastic pictures. You enter your credit card information to buy tickets, and you think you are all set. But before you buy, do a little research. Whether the event is non-existent, merely disappointing, or you just bought phony tickets, the result is the same: someone pockets your hard-earned money!

BBB Scam Tracker has received numerous reports from people who purchased fake tickets to real events or bought tickets to events that never materialized.

A customer in Memphis reported buying tickets for $82.50 to a "Bubble Run" in June 2022 that never happened: "Facebook event page advertised the Bubble run as a free event. I purchased 4 'entries' with glasses and tutus and they charged my debit card. They then cancelled the event refuse to respond to emails. They are still advertising on Facebook like the event is happening."

One consumer who purchased tickets to a fake beer crawl reported: "Reviews across multiple platforms make it clear that these events are at best extremely misleading or at worst canceled. No refunds are given, even when their inconsistent and mostly-unreachable customer service email address responds to confirm a refund will be provided."

How to spot a fake festival

- Research before you buy. Search online for the festival's name and ensure the name advertised matches the website. Scammers often use names that sound similar to those of real festivals.

- Check for (working) contact information. Be sure the festival website has a real phone number and email address.

- Watch out for prices that sound too good to be true. There is no way a festival can offer tickets at extremely low prices without losing money. If the prices are much lower than elsewhere, it's likely a scam.

What can you do?

- Pay with a credit card. You can dispute the charges if the business doesn't come through. Be wary of online sellers that don't accept credit cards.

- Look for secure sites. The website should begin with HTTPS (the extra "s" is for secure) and have a little lock symbol on the address bar.

- Avoid tickets sold on Craigslist, Facebook Marketplace, and other free online listings. Scammers are skilled at providing realistic tickets and fake receipts. Check out third-party ticket sites at BBB.org before making purchases.

Robert E. McBride, 88

ROBERT E. MCBRIDE

Robert "Bob" E. McBride, age 88, of Quincy and formerly of Dorchester, passed away peacefully in the comfort of his home in Quincy Point on Wednesday, June 15, 2022.

Born Aug. 31, 1933 in Brookline, MA, Bob was the eldest of five children and the son of immigrant parents, the late Thomas McBride, from Kilkenny, Ireland and his wife Rose (Doherty) McBride, from Donegal, Ireland.

Bob was proudly raised in the Savin Hill section of Dorchester, MA, growing up on Doris St. He attended St. William's School and graduated from St. Ann's School, Neponset in 1947. As a youngster in the 40s and 50s, Bob played many a football or baseball game at Hemenway Park, forming friendships playing baseball with the few organized teams called the "Wildcats". He continued to maintain those close relationships from his youth for over 60 years during their monthly "Wildcat" luncheons. After one year at BC High, Bob attended Cathedral High School in Dorchester, where in Latin Class in 1948, he met the love of his life, Eleanor (O'Brien) McBride. Bob and Eleanor later graduated from Cathedral High School in 1951.

In 1953, Bob enlisted in the Navy and proudly served his country during the Korean War, stationed on the aircraft carrier, USS Valley Forge. On Aug. 25, 1956 Bob married Eleanor in St. John's Church, Quincy and embarked on his most cherished role as devoted husband and father of six children. They lived in Weymouth before purchasing a home and settling in Quincy on June 30, 1960 building lasting relationships with friends and neighbors ever since.

In 1958, Bob began working at the Boston Edison Company, while earning his Bachelor of Business Administration in Engineering and Management from Northeastern University, graduating in 1963. At Boston Edison, Bob enjoyed his assignments and the relationships he built during his 39 years of sales and management, retiring on June 1, 1994. It was there that he formed cherished friendships which continued years later with retirees and their spouses during the monthly "Edison Luncheons" for over 20 years.

A devoted and caring husband, it was evident to all who knew him that he adored his wife, Eleanor, "Ellie", as they carried out their shared values of faith and love into their later years. As a loving father, Bob was deeply invested in and proud of his children's Catholic education and college degrees, their travels and their careers. Nothing brought him more fulfillment than being a good husband and father. He was truly admired by his children for his strong work ethic, guidance, and discipline. As a proud Grampa, Bob spent time involved with local family activities, events and celebrations and he always gave his best to be present for his grandchildren's sports activities and milestones when they were young.

Being a man of great faith, Bob was committed to serving his St. Joseph's Parish community where he and Eleanor were devoted and active parishioners for over 60 years. Bob served on the St. Joseph School Education Board, was a longtime member of the Holy Name Society, and also served on the St. Joseph Church Parish Council. At the church, Bob proudly served as lector at the 4:00 Mass on Saturdays and at daily Mass, was a Eucharistic Minister, an usher, and at times, even an altar server when needed. The parishioners and close friends of St. Joseph's Parish brought him much joy in his later years.

Bob and Eleanor had an extra special admiration for the Sisters of St. Joseph who not only taught them both at Cathedral HS, but who also taught their six children at St. Joseph's School in Quincy.

"Many good days and nights were spent there" was a phrase Bob often used when driving by Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree. Bob and Ellie were strong believers in the foundation of a Catholic education and as a result, were proud to have all six children graduate from AWHs.

Bob lived a fulfilled life and was blessed with 28 years of retirement. A faithful friend himself, Bob was fond of his broad circle of friends and appreciated how blessed he was with friendships that lasted and thrived into his retirement years. Those who knew Bob will remember him for his warm and constant presence as someone who showed up to lend a hand, provide a ride or offer a kind word. He loved meeting or bumping into people while he was out doing errands with Eleanor, disappointed if he didn't run into someone he knew. In retirement, Bob and Eleanor enjoyed taking a few trips to Disneyworld and numerous mini-trips to northern New England and Cape Cod. But there was no spot Bob cherished more than sitting on South Beach during his annual trip to Martha's Vineyard every year during the final week in August for over 30 years.

A true Irish gentleman with a twinkle in his eye, a charming manner and a generosity to match, Bob was a compassionate man who touched people's hearts. Bob, who was content with in his own surroundings, continuously expressed gratitude to his family and dedicated caregivers in his later years. In addition to the loving care provided by his six children, Bob was also blessed with three exceptional and compassionate caregivers, Shelia Donovan, Joanne McGee, and Mary Tarrant. The McBride Family will be forever grateful to them for their friendship, support and kindness that

THE MIRACLE PRAYER

Dear Heart of Jesus, in the past, I have asked for many favors. This time, I ask you this very special favor (mention favor). Take it dear Heart of Jesus, and place it within your own broken heart where your father sees it. Then in his merciful eyes it will become your favor, not mine.
Amen.
Say this prayer for 3 days, promise publication and favor will be granted, no matter how impossible. Never known to fail. E.M.

Happy Fourth of July
to my sister,
Cathy Birchmore.

I love you and miss you.

Beatrice A. Baker, 96

Beatrice A. (Anderson) Baker, age 96, of Hingham, died peacefully, Friday, July 1, 2022, at Rose Court at Linden Ponds in Hingham.

Beatrice was born in Quincy, to the late Emil and Anna L. (Olson) Anderson. Raised in the Wollaston section of Quincy, she was a graduate of North Quincy High School. Beatrice earned her nursing degree from the former New England Hospital for Women and Children.

She lived in Hingham for the past nine years, previously in Strafford, N.H. for over 20 years, and earlier in Amherst, N.H., after raising her family in Braintree.

Beatrice was employed as a registered nurse at the former Quincy City Hospital for 20 years, primarily on the medical surgery floor.

Bea, Auntie Bea, Mom, Grammie, Great Grammie was vivacious, loving and energized whenever she was with people. She loved getting to know others; sharing life stories and fun facts.

Her smile would light up a room and her welcoming countenance was there for us all. Her caring was obvious and true, and each person received it as their own personal gift and connected with her in love, friendship, and goodwill.

She had a way of innocently sending us all, including herself, into tear-streaming and side-aching laughter like no other.

She enjoyed music, singing, parades and was an avid reader of mysteries.

Family was very important; she cared deeply for and took an interest in each and every one.

Bea grew up two blocks from Wollaston Beach and would often walk there with a lettuce sandwich to spend the day.

At 17 she had a job for the war effort making housing for bomb parachutes. She also served in the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps.

She met her husband-to-be, Ed, at a party where he was playing the piano and she walked right over to sing along. "My Funny Valentine" was one favorite.

They raised a family in Braintree while Bea worked part-time as a nurse. Summer vacations were spent at the old family farmstead in Maine and tent trailer camping at various campgrounds.

After the kids were grown, Bea and Ed moved to Amherst, N.H. in 1978, where they enjoyed a few years until Ed was diagnosed with cancer. There, Bea cared for him in their home until his death in 1983. At the same time, she continued to care for her elderly mother-in-law at home for ten more years.

Around 1987, a 24-year relationship began between Bea and Bill (an old Braintree neighbor). She eventually moved to Strafford, N.H. to Bill's working organic farm and enjoyed the country living. Neighbors, workers and customers became friends, and she always loved having family visit. Bea was there with Bill when he passed away suddenly in their home.

In 2013, Bea decided to move to Linden Ponds Independent Living. She was very happy in her cozy apartment, met new neighbors who became friends, joined the chorus and lived an active life. A special relationship grew between Bea and Charlie, who she met in the library one day. This meeting turned out to be the beginning of a loving relationship that lasted through thick and thin.

In February 2020, Bea became very ill with bronchitis, sending her to the hospital during the height of the COVID panic. Eventually she settled into the Assisted Living community of Linden Ponds which became her new cozy home. As always, she continued making new friends, including caregivers, housekeeping, administration and residents.

June 2022, pneumonia struck and Bea was moved to Long Term Care due to complications. In the midst of everything, she maintained her bright, clear, happy, thoughtful, loving and thankful spirit. A blessing to anyone who would cross her path.

Through her love, Bea was a caregiver to family, to friends, to patients,

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – Jerry Seinfeld will make his film directorial debut with a script he wrote, is producing and is starring in as well. The film's set in 1963 Michigan, when Pop Tarts were invented by Kellogg's. Seinfeld's stand-up act had a routine about the creation of Pop Tarts. It's available on YouTube (from 2010) and has been seen on The Tonight Show and in his Netflix special. For his film version, he's enlisted some of the "who's who" of comedy today: Melissa McCarthy, Jim Gaffigan, Amy Schumer, Bobby Moynihan, Jack McBrayer as well as Hugh Grant, James Marsden, Max Greenfield and Christian Slater.

Last week, we told you Joaquin Phoenix is returning in a sequel to "Joker" called "Joker: Folie à Deux," and guess what? It's become a musical, with the casting of Lady Gaga as Harley Quinn.

Not a sequel, but a prequel for "The Hunger Games" (the trilogy grossed $3 billion) will star Josh Andres Rivera (of Broadway's "Hamilton" and Chino in Spielberg's "West Side Story"), his co-star Rachel Zegler (Maria in "West Side Story") and Tom Blyth (who will portray Coriolanus Snow, originally played by Donald Sutherland). The prequel's called "The Ballad of Songbirds and Snakes," and opens Nov. 17, 2023.

Jennifer Hudson became the 17th person and 5th woman to join the exclusive EGOT club. (In order to become a member, you must win an Emmy, a Grammy, an Oscar and a Tony Award.) Hudson won her Oscar for "Dreamgirls" (2007); two Grammys, one for "The Color Purple" (2017); a Daytime Emmy for "Baba Yaga" (2021); and a Tony Award last month, as a producer of Broadway's "A Strange Loop." Hudson once confessed, "I got a dog and named him Oscar, and I won an Oscar. I got another dog and named him Grammy and won a Grammy. So, I thought I should get some dogs and name them Emmy and Tony."

Have you wondered where to go on that dream vacation or how to spend that $110,000 you socked away? Well, Disney is offering a dream vacation flying in a private Iceland Air Boeing 747 on a 24-day tour to 12 Disney parks around the world. The trip includes stops to see the Taj Mahal, the pyramids of Giza, the Eiffel Tower, the Lucasfilm campus and Walt Disney Studios. However, the price doesn't include airfare to or from the point where the trip begins. But it does include three adventure guides, Disney VIPs, Imagineers, cultural experts, three staff members, a chef and a physician. But, you better hurry: It happens July 9-Aug. 1, 2023, and there are only 75 spots. Does that give me enough time to start up a GoFundMe?

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Cream of Wheat, a cereal first marketed in 1898, is still a popular winter breakfast cereal. A trolley sign in a recent auction showed the picture of a box of Cream of Wheat and two children eating it from a bowl. The sign read, "Summer Favorite Served Cold with Fruit." Was Cream of Wheat originally served cold? Most advertising, even today, promotes the use of the hot, cooked cereal for a winter breakfast.

We searched the Internet and cookbooks and not one suggested that cold Cream of Wheat might be served at breakfast. Did the company have an advertising campaign that promoted it? This sign could have been part of the advertising. The box is one used in the 1930s, though the clothes seem more like the 1940s. The trolley sign is 12 1/2 x 22 1/2 inches, made of cardboard or heavy paper, and in good condition. Someone is bound to buy it just for the memories of the cold, lumpy breakfast. Or maybe with a lot of maple syrup or bacon, it was a favorite cold breakfast.

Q: I have a cane with a brass handle in the shape of a horse's head. The head unscrews to reveal space for a small flask sealed with a cork. The shaft of the cane unscrews into three sections. What is the potential value?

A: Canes weren't only used as an aid to walking but were also popular fashion accessories in the 1700s to the early 1900s. Canes with special features or those that conceal items are called gadget canes. They were made for both men and women. Canes have been made that conceal flasks, cameras, drugs, fans, guns, lighters, maps, perfume bottles, pool cues, sewing kits, snuff, surgical instruments, swords, telescopes, tools and other items. The material of the head, any special features and condition determine price. Some gadget canes sell for several hundred dollars, some for less than $50. Horse's head gadget canes with concealed flasks sold recently for $40 to $90.

CURRENT PRICES

Masonic pendant, Knights Templar symbols, cross, crown, In Hoc Signo Vinces, 14K gold, square, black and red enamel, sphynx and sword connector, 1 1/4 inches, $490.

Strange BUT TRUE

• In 1992, the president of Sri Lanka changed the spelling of the first English syllable of his country's name from 'Sri' to 'Shri' in the belief that it would improve the nation's fortunes. Unfortunately, he failed to reap any possible benefit, as he was assassinated the following year (and the spelling was reverted).

• Possums don't actually play dead. They merely pass out from fear of their predators.

• The name 'coconut' comes from 16th-century Portuguese sailors. It is believed that the three holes on the fruit resembled a face, so it was honored with the word 'coco', meaning 'grin' or 'grinning face'. The nut part was added later.

• Ketchup leaves the bottle at a rate of 25 miles per year.

• When a U.K. autoshop mechanic saw the Google Street View car heading in his direction, he thought it would be fun to stage a murder scene. Police paid his shop a visit a year later after the image finally appeared on Street View.

• The Argentine Football Association published a cultural manual ahead of the 2018 World Cup that included a section on how to seduce Russian women.

• As a child, Mark Twain nearly drowned nine times before he learned to swim.

• Looking to speed up your decision-making capacity? Try an action video game! Players tend to develop a heightened sensitivity to their surroundings, which in turn aids them with multitasking and activities such as driving, navigating around town and even keeping track of friends in a crowd.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

• If you like taking baths, you can invest in a second rubber bathmat to drape over the side of the tub. The edge will be nonslip, so you can hold on for support, and your hands will not slide.

• Before frosting a cake, brush both layers with apricot nectar. This will secure any crumbs and provide a smooth surface. – L.H. in Illinois

• For drains slowed by grease, sprinkle a half-cup each of salt and baking soda down the drain, and follow it with an entire kettle or pot of boiling water.

• If the smell in your cedar chest has faded, bring it back easily with extra-fine sandpaper. A very light sanding is all it takes in most cases.

• For delicious baked potatoes, boil a pot of salted water, add whole potatoes with skin, remove from heat and let stand for 15 minutes. Finish in oven for a sturdier skin. Start checking for doneness after 15 minutes in the oven. Baking time can be cut in half! – J.L. in Florida

• Remove that musty smell from stored clothes by adding either vinegar or ammonia to the wash water. Be sure to check for smell removal BEFORE drying, as the dryer can bake the smell into clothes, making it more difficult to remove.

Q: What was the last film my favorite, Tim Burton, directed? I don't remember anything since he directed Johnny Depp in "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory." I hope he hasn't stopped directing. — S.O.

A: In 1985, "Pee-wee's Big Adventure" burst on the big screen as a visual gift that would become Tim Burton's trademark. His aesthetic would thrill audiences with eye candy like "Beetlejuice," "Edward Scissorhands" and "Batman." His collaborations with Johnny Depp and Michael Keaton in those films made him one of the top directors in Hollywood in the 1990s, before his career took a dip in the 2000s with movies that weren't as well-received, such as "Dark Shadows" and, most recently, "Dumbo." Somewhere in the middle were gems like "Big Fish" and the animated "Frankenweenie."

With the movie industry finally recovering from the pandemic, big film directors like Burton are back behind the lens carrying out their visions. With Burton, you can look forward to the upcoming "Beetlejuice 2," with Michael Keaton and Winona Ryder reprising their roles from the original, and also starring Ryder's "Stranger Things" co-star David Harbour as well as comedy-gold Will Arnett. Not set for release until 2025, hopefully the sequel will be worth the wait. In the meantime, look for Burton's upcoming Netflix series "Wednesday," which is about the daughter of "The Addams Family" as she enters high school and discovers her powers.

Q: I was thrilled to see photos of Dick Van Dyke out and about in his 90s. However, what about his "Mary Poppins" co-star Julie Andrews? How is she doing? — J.K.

A: Now 86 years old, Oscar-winner Julie Andrews is doing more voiceover work these days, but it's for several major projects. She narrates the Netflix series "Bridgerton" as Lady Whistledown. She recently told Hoda Kotb on the "Today" show that she hasn't met the cast in person because she does the voice work from "far, far away." She's also voicing the character of Marlena Gru in the new animated feature film "Minions: The Rise of Gru" and, earlier this year, narrated the film "The King's Daughter," which was the last project William Hurt acted in before his death in March.

As for the also-legendary Dick Van Dyke, the spry 96-year-old was recently spotted leaving a restaurant in Los Angeles and buying tanning spray at a drugstore.

Q: Where have I seen the actress who plays Sheryl on the TV show "Evil"? I know she was on a medical drama or something years ago, but I can't remember the name. — K.S.

A: Christine Lahti played Dr. Kate Austin on the CBS medical drama "Chicago Hope" in the mid-1990s, for which she won an Emmy and a Golden Globe Award. The character is probably best remembered for leaving a clamp inside one of her patients during an operation. Lahti has gone on to play an assistant district attorney on "Law & Order: SVU" and a corrupt national security advisor in "The Blacklist."

High Temperatures and Kittens Don't Mix

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I live in hot, humid Florida and have the opportunity to adopt two kittens. My home has no air conditioning -- only ceiling and floor fans. When I return home during the summer, the indoor temperature can reach 95 degrees with high humidity. Can a kitten handle such high indoor temperatures and high humidity for nine hours a day? If there is any possibility of harm, I will not obtain the kittens. -- Ann T., via email

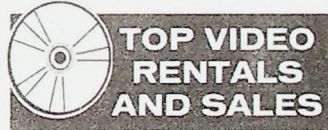

DEAR ANN: If there's doubt in your mind, you already know the answer. I commend you for thinking of the welfare of the kittens first. Now, I'll tell you a similar story. During my first years out of college, I rented a small apartment in sunny, humid Orlando that had no air conditioning either. However, the first thing I purchased was a window unit air conditioner. Not for me, but for my cat. It was a significant expense, and it boosted my electric bill dramatically, but I didn't think twice about it.

Pets rely on us to keep them safe, fed and comfortable. An indoor cat doesn't have control over the temperature and humidity in the home. As the temperature rises, they have few options to cool off -- no breezy, shady spots to lounge in, not much fresh air. At 95 degrees, even with a full bowl of water nearby, pets can suffer a heat injury. Kittens are even more vulnerable.

If you'd like to adopt the kittens, first work out a way to keep your home's temperature below 80 degrees. Pets are an investment in happiness. Their comfort and safety are part of that investment. Thank you again for thinking of the kittens' safety.

The Desperate Hour (PG-13) — A thriller filmed in 2021, "The Desperate Hour" stars Naomi Watts in the lead role of Amy, a widowed mother. Still coping with her husband's death, Amy and her son face yet another traumatic event in their lives when a shooting takes place at his school. Amy's on a jog in the woods 5 miles from her home when she receives a notification on her phone about the active shooter. Learning that her son and four other people have barricaded themselves inside the school, Amy attempts to find the quickest way out of the woods and to the school so she can help get her son out of harm's way. Watts' portrayal of a parent's panic in this unimaginable moment really carries the film. (Hulu)

Spiderhead (R) — Taking place sometime in the future, a penitentiary deemed "Spiderhead" holds convicts who have agreed to undergo experimental drug tests in order to shorten their prison sentence. Some of the drugs include a love drug (N-40), Darkenflox (a drug that generates great pain) and a laughing drug. The prisoners learn that the effects of these drugs shouldn't be underestimated, and neither should the sociopathic man in charge — as our main character, an inmate named Jeff, gets to the bottom of. For those who are fans of "Black Mirror" or other dystopian stories, this new film starring Chris Hemsworth ("Thor") and "Top

Chloe (TV-16+) — Becky (Erin Doherty from "The Crown") is a young woman who works a temp job and still lives at home with her mother. Like most 20-somethings, Becky is obsessed with social media, living her life vicariously through it, specifically through an influencer on Instagram named Chloe. When Chloe suddenly passes away, Becky is anxious to find out more. Unable to kill her curiosity, Becky slowly begins infiltrating herself into Chloe's old life by using any clues she can gather through Instagram about Chloe and her friends. It's only a matter of time before Becky realizes she's in way too deep. This six-part series hailing from the BBC is out on streaming now. (Prime Video)

America the Beautiful (TV-PG) — Right on time for Independence Day, National Geographic launches a new series based on the lovely land whose birthday we're celebrating this week. Narrated by Michael B. Jordan, each episode has a different theme focusing on regions throughout the country, with the very first episode focusing on the Golden Coast. Throughout the series, viewers get to follow the majestic creatures who inhabit each area and how the rough climate has forced these creatures to adapt over time. For the finale of the show, the producers worked alongside indigenous tribes to give insight on the fight against climate change. (Disney+)

The bidding:

Opening lead — queen of diamonds.

Declarer often finds himself faced with a choice of plays that seem to make no difference one way or the other. Nevertheless, he must examine such situations to see whether one play should be preferred over the other. Failure to follow this practice cost South his contract in today's deal.

West led the queen of diamonds, and dummy's king was taken by East's ace. East returned the diamond three to West's ten, and West continued with the jack.

Declarer ruffed with dummy's seven of hearts and was overruffed by East's nine. East then cashed the ace of spades to put the contract down one.

South would have made his game had he not covered the queen of diamonds with the king at trick one. In that case, no overruff would have taken place, and he would have lost only two diamonds and a spade.

In considering his play to the opening trick, South should assume West does not have the ace of diamonds. After placing the ace with East, declarer should then conclude that nothing can be gained by covering the queen with the king.

Conversely, ducking the queen can gain if East was dealt the singleton or doubleton ace. When East has the singleton ace, he is forced to play it on his partner's queen, establishing dummy's king. And when East has the A-x, the danger of a third-round overruff in diamonds is substantially reduced.

So, although it does not seem to matter very much whether declarer covers the opening lead or not, which would certainly be true in most deals, the right play is to duck — just in case.

Cuff Location Matters For BP Reading

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have always read that when you are having your blood pressure taken, your arm should be elevated above your heart. When mine is taken this way, it is normal, around 120/70. When I go to the doctor, my blood pressure is taken with my arm hanging at my side. I often get a much higher reading taken this way, say, 140/90. Is there a correct way to take it, and does it affect the reading? My doctor said the position doesn't matter and wants to prescribe medication. -- U.P.

ANSWER: When taking the blood pressure, the goal is to approximate the blood pressure in the heart. That means that the blood pressure cuff should be at the level of the heart. If the blood pressure cuff is above the heart, then the blood pressure reading will be artificially low. If the blood pressure cuff is dangling below the level of the heart, the reading will be high.

For every 10 cm (about 4 inches) above the heart, the blood pressure will be about 7 mm of mercury too low. If I stretch out my arm as high as I can above my heart, I can get it about 30 cm higher than my heart, which would be enough to explain the difference between the 140/90 and 120/70 you have observed. However, for most people when sitting up straight, a properly placed cuff on the arm will approximate the same level as the heart. Although you are right that the position matters, it sounds like the doctor's office is taking the reading correctly.

I should also note that the feet should be resting on the floor, not dangling, which can artificially raise the blood pressure. The arm should be supported while taking the blood pressure. I recommend taking the blood pressure three times and using the average.

Given how important blood pressure is, correct technique is essential in order to properly recommend who should get blood pressure treatment. Evidence is increasing that a 24-hour home blood pressure device is more accurate at determining who might need medication, especially in suspected white coat hypertension, where the readings are artificially high just because a person is in the office (even if they don't feel nervous).

DEAR DR. ROACH: I was receiving testosterone injections for a diagnosed low testosterone level (96, with the normal 300-720). I received testosterone injections for many years, as directed by my doctor at that time. Ultimately, I changed doctors, and the new one prohibited the testosterone injections as "too dangerous to continue." I objected then, and I am about to object again, since my symptoms in the past year continue to point to low testosterone, in my mind. I have low energy level, low libido and erectile dysfunction. -- M.J.

ANSWER: If a person with normal testosterone takes a large amount of extra testosterone, such as athletes looking for a performance boost, there are significant risks. Scientists used to worry that a similar issue would be the case if a person with low testosterone took a replacement dose to get him into the normal range, but the fears of testosterone replacement therapy have been proven largely unjustified.

Given your symptoms and your definite low level, experts would agree that you are a good candidate for long-term testosterone replacement therapy. The risks and benefits are not known with certainty, but the evidence so far suggests no serious risks and some potential benefits on heart health, even beyond improvement in symptoms. I would suggest a consultation with an expert on testosterone replacement, such as a urologist.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu.

Managing Garden Pests With Pollinators In Mind

By MELINDA MYERS

Every garden season is filled with beautiful and tasty surprises along with a few challenges. One challenge gardeners face each year is managing insect pests while keeping the pollinators safe. Fortunately, only a very small percent of insects in our landscapes are harmful. The rest help pollinate plants, feed upon or parasitize bad insects, or help decompose plant debris.

Proper identification of the plant-damaging culprit is the first step in managing problems. Often the insect that is most visible is not the one causing the damage. You can find lots of helpful information and images online. Look for websites hosted by your local university, extension service or botanical garden. They often provide timely tips on pests in your area.

Once identified, you will need to decide if control is needed. Some insect damage is just cosmetic meaning the plant's health and longevity are not adversely affected, it just looks bad. In these cases, control is for us not the health of our plants. Consider tolerating the damage and masking it with nearby plantings or garden art.

In other cases, the damage is done, and the insect is no longer present. Revenge spraying may make you feel better but does nothing to fix the problem. Make a note on next year's calendar to watch for and manage the pest if you feel control is really needed. Finding pest problems early makes hand removal easier and may be all that is needed.

Often when we see the damage on our plants, control will not help. Many galls, unusual growths on plants, are caused by insect feeding. When we see the gall, the insect is either safely living inside the gall or it has fled to complete another stage of its life. At that point, control will not work and in most cases, this is a cosmetic issue and control is not needed.

Work with nature to help manage pest problems. By tolerating some damage, you provide the food that attracts nature's pest controllers to the garden. Watch for aphid-eating lady beetles and green lacewings that eat hundreds of these pests each day. Invite songbirds to your landscape with seed and berry producing plants and a clean, fresh source of water. Ninety six percent of terrestrial birds feed their young insects. And then there are those non-stinging, parasitizing wasps that lay their eggs in other insects. When the eggs hatch the young feed on the host. Avoid pesticides and provide water and shelter to attract and support insect eating toads and frogs.

Enlist help from the youngsters in your life. Try the pluck, drop, and stomp method. Teach young gardeners to identify problem insects, pick them off the plants by hand, drop them to the ground and stomp. What a great way to teach kids about nature and help them burn off some of their excess energy.

Handpicking or knocking insects like Japanese beetles into a can of soapy water is a great way to manage small populations of pests. A fellow horticulturist uses a small hand vacuum to capture Japanese beetles. Just be sure to empty the insect filled vacuum contents into a can of soapy water before storing.

If you decide you need to lend nature a hand managing garden pests, look for more ecofriendly options. Barriers of floating row covers - fabrics that allow air, light, and water through - can keep cabbage worms, onion maggots, Japanese beetles, and some other insects from laying their eggs on their favorite plants. Cover the plants with the fabric at planting, anchor the edges and leave enough slack for plants to grow. No construction is needed.

Covering squash plants at planting until flowering begins can help reduce the risk of squash bugs and squash vine borers. Covering cucumbers at planting until ten days after flowering begins helps reduce the risk of cucumber beetles infecting these plants with the bacteria that causes wilt. The row covers also prevent birds from dining on the seeds and seedlings.

Cover late plantings of susceptible plants as needed this season. Then make a note on next year's calendar to enlist this method for controlling these types of pests for your first planting next year.

Enlist the help of the naturally occurring soil bacteria Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt) to protect plants from certain pests. Different strains of this bacteria control different insects. Bt kurstaki only kills true caterpillars. Using this on members of the cabbage family won't harm other butterflies since these plants only attract the cabbage worm moths. Bt galleriae will control Japanese and other beetles.

Use a strong blast of water to dislodge mites and aphids. These pests suck plant juices and secrete a clear sticky substance called honeydew. Extensive feeding can cause distorted growth, speckling, yellowing, and browning of the leaves.

If more control is needed, look for help from one of the organic contact insecticides like Summit Year-Round Spray Oil, a lightweight horticulture oil. These products kill the insects they contact but leave no residue on the plants that can harm beneficial insects that visit the plants later.

Whenever using any product, even natural and organic, be sure to read and follow label directions. This will ensure the best control and least negative impact on beneficial insects and the environment.

Take a few notes on pests you encounter, any management strategies used and the results. This will help when encountering problems in the future. With minimal time and a bit of creativity you can keep your garden looking good all season long.

Quincy Artist Showcase: Paula Mine

Quincy Art Association Featured Artist of the Month: Paula Mine

"I've been making art as long as I can remember but I still consider myself an amateur.

"I recall making my first oil paintings from the left-over oil paint in paint by number kits. They were often paintings of wolves and Native Americans and were on plain paper. They didn't hold up well.

"I was obsessed with drawing and painting animals as a child. One of my big influences was The Jungle Book, and I made images of snarling tigers obsessively.

"Next came the horse phase when I discovered the books of Walter Farley and the Black Stallion series, which at that time were illustrated by a local artists Ruth Sanderson. Her covers were beautiful, and they inspired. I traced, I copied, and I did my own original pictures. Incidentally, Ruth just put out a book about how to draw horses last year. I of course had to buy it.

PAULA MINE at the National Museum of American Illustration in Newport, Rhode Island.

"Book illustrators have often been my inspiration. I discovered the works of artist Michael Whalen in high school and was blown away by his talent. He did many of the covers of the sci fi/fantasy books I and my friends were reading. It was around this time my interest in painting people outdid my interest in animals.

"I also went on to discover and love so many other brilliant artists, many of them illustrators like Rockwell and NC Wyeth. I also have to say I give credit to the Bob Rosses and Captain Bobs of my childhood, who got young people excited about drawing and painting and showed them they could do it.

"My favorite medium has always been oil paints. I love how they can be blended and are so much more forgiving when you are taking days to complete a work. But I also enjoy the challenge of acrylic at times. It tends to make you think more because you have a much shorter time period to work the piece, but then it also dries faster and you can correct something without it bleeding into what you are doing next.

"I've tried watercolors also, and they can be fun but require a whole other way of thinking about the subject. But I'm up for trying most anything. I've done figure sculpting, carving, even rubber stamping when I had little time and a small child, anything to be creative. Right now, I'm doing some slate caving with chisels. I'd love to try welding, but I'm not sure I'll get to that.

"One of my favorite pieces that I've done is actually a landscape. I tried using a pallet knife to paint an ocean scene during the Blizzard of 2015 as a way to stay sane while watching the snow pile up. I did the same picture three times and really got a feel for working with the knife. It was a very loose compared to how I usually work.

"Two of my other favorites are 'Fabulous Fakes' I did as entries to the Quincy Arts Fest a few years ago. They are both copies of Sargent's work, (one of my current favorite artists) and I found that by studying the art and artists it was really helpful in learning how to paint like them, what strokes and colors he uses and how he approached a work. I love how they both came out and they hang in my home today.

"I don't have a studio at home, which can be a pain. If I'm working on something on an easel it's in the middle of the living room, or maybe on the front porch if it's nice weather. It's always fun to get looks from people walking by wondering what you are up to.

"My advice to anyone looking to paint in oils is to just go ahead and do it. Find some inexpensive paints and some decent brushes and just play. (I recommend low odor paint cleaners). And you don't have to paint on canvas, you can gesso a flat bit of thin plywood if you have some scraps, or some cardboard, or even pads of canvas paper, because over time, paintings take up space.

"Experiment, copy, practice drawing because I think that always helps you understand form and thus helps you paint. Try a limited palette of colors, use just a few and see what you can do with them. And don't compare yourself to other artists. Do what makes you happy.

"If you are interested in learning more, take a class with a teacher you like, and also try YouTube for tutorials. Take some time to go to an art museum and look closely at the works. Dive into an artist you like.

"Practice, practice, practice. And if oils aren't your thing, try something else. But start small, don't go out and buy everything, work your way up once you decide you like what you are doing."

Early, Mail-In Voting Available For Fall Election

By SCOTT JACKSON

Massachusetts voters will have the option to cast their ballots by mail or through in-person early voting during this fall's state elections and in future state and federal elections.

Gov. Charlie Baker recently signed into law the VOTES Act, which permanently codifies expanded voter access first made popular in Massachusetts during 2020, following votes by the Senate and House approving the legislation earlier this session. This sweeping voter reform encompasses a number of programs and supports to increase voter access, including mail-in and early voting.

"Democracy is a process through which everyone has a voice. We need to ensure those voices are being heard," Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy) said in a statement. "These provisions have made voting so much easier and efficient for so many Massachusetts residents, ultimately steering us toward a more representative and responsive government. Getting more people involved in the process will allow elected officials to get a better sense of what our constituents want."

Massachusetts saw record high voter turnouts in 2020 thanks to expanded voter access, Keenan said. Approximately 3.6 million residents cast ballots in 2020, totaling 76 percent of all registered voters. More than 40 percent of voters cast ballots by mail in the 2020 general election, with another 23 percent participating during early voting. Similarly, more than 1.7 million people voted in the 2020 state primary, the highest number of voters ever in a state primary. Close to half of all voters voted by mail during the primary.

"Instead of a mass mailing of ballots as some believe and which I am opposed to, Massachusetts voters will now be able to receive a mail-in ballot through a simple application process, making voting more inclusive," Keenan said. "Voters who are physically unable to get to a polling place and voters with inflexible work schedules will now have fewer barriers to participating in the democratic process."

The VOTES Act allows registered voters to vote by mail for any presidential, state or municipal primary or election. Communities like Quincy that do not hold their local elections on the same day as state or federal elections can opt out of early voting by mail for municipal elections. In Quincy's case, the City Council would have to vote to opt out of mail-in balloting following a public hearing, said City Clerk Nicole Crispo.

The law allows registered voters to request a mail-in ballot for all applicable preliminary, primary and final elections in the calendar year. It requires the secretary of the commonwealth to send out mail-in ballot applications, with return postage guaranteed, to registered voters before each presidential primary, state primary, and biennial state election. The secretary is also required to create an online portal to allow voters to request a mail-in ballot. The law further requires mail-in ballot applications to be posted on every municipality's website and guarantees return postage for all mail-in ballots.

In addition, the VOTES Act also enshrines into law two weeks, including two weekends, of early voting for biennial state elections and one week, including one weekend, of early voting for presidential and state primaries. Municipalities are required to establish accessible early voting sites and larger communities must have sites open for longer hours during the early voting period.

The law also allows municipalities to opt-in to early voting in-person for any other municipal election not held on the same day as a state or federal election.

For the upcoming elections this fall, early voting will be available from Aug. 27 to Sept. 2 ahead of the Sept. 6 state primary and from Oct. 22 to Nov. 4 ahead of the Nov. 8 final election.

Crispo said she was still finalizing the early voting locations and hours for the fall.

The law also provides electronic voting options for voters with disabilities and service members. It enables a voter with disabilities to request accommodations from the secretary of the commonwealth, including an accessible electronic ballot application, ballot, and voter affidavit that can be submitted electronically. It streamlines the voting process for uniformed and overseas citizens, giving them the option to vote through an electronic system approved by the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The law also includes reforms to the voter registration process. The deadline to register to vote in any preliminary, primary or final election is now 10 days before the election, rather than the previous 20. The secretary of the commonwealth's online voter registration portal must be offered in multiple languages. The law also clarifies the automatic voter registration process.

Further, the law includes jail-based voting reforms. It helps ensure that incarcerated individuals who are currently eligible to vote can exercise their voting rights, requires correctional facilities to display and distribute voter education and election information materials as prepared by the secretary of the commonwealth, and requires facilities to assist individuals who are incarcerated and may be eligible to vote in registering, applying for and returning mail-in ballots. It also requires the secretary of the commonwealth provide guidance to local election officials about the qualifications and rights of eligible incarcerated voters and how to process their applications to register and vote and requires facilities to provide voting information and a voter registration form upon an individual's release from the facility.

The VOTES act also provides flexibility for local officials and improvements to election administration. It gives municipalities the option to set up secure drop boxes for mail-in ballots, allows election officials to pre-process mail-in and early voting ballots by opening up envelopes and verifying signatures in advance of Election Day, eases the process by which election officials can appoint and fill vacancies in poll workers, requires the secretary of the commonwealth to join the Electronic Registration Information Center by July 1 to help Massachusetts keep more accurate voting rolls and instructs the secretary of the commonwealth to conduct a comprehensive public awareness campaign to highlight the provisions in the bill.
